Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement approved by the Directors

Business ethics and corporate social responsibility are at the heart of everything Sweco does. Sweco is committed to social responsibility and has zero tolerance towards slavery and human trafficking from occurring within our business and supply chain.

Business profile

Sweco plans and designs the cities and communities of the future. Sweco AB is a listed group, headquartered in Stockholm, Sweden, with 17,500 employees across Northern Europe. Our UK business comprises approximately 1200 people across 20 offices in the UK and Ireland, providing engineering and environmental consultancy services in asset management, building services, energy, landscape and environment, transportation, and water.

Our Approach

Sweco's Code of Conduct applies to all companies in the Group, the board of directors, and all employees. They promote the equal rights and opportunities of employees in the workplace and guide us in maintaining trust and credibility in our stakeholders. Our Group policies outline our commitment to work in accordance with the principles of the UN's Universal Declaration of Human Rights. We require all our employees confirm that they comply with these policies in all respects.

Violations of human rights are never permitted. Sweco does not tolerate child labour in any part of its own operations or in the operations of any business partner (which includes key members of our supply chain/sub consultants) and does not permit illegal or forced labour.

Employees

Sweco UK's business employs people solely within UK and Ireland. Our Human Resources team provide the framework tools to support the recruitment process and understand the Modern Slavery Act and its requirements. They continually review our HR procedures in relation to managing the risk of slavery, forced or compulsory labour or human trafficking amongst our employees.

We strive to ensure that we maintain the uppermost standards of conduct and ethical behaviour in everything we do, and each year, all employees are required to confirm that they have read the and Code of Conduct and are required to undertake Business Ethics training as part of their induction and every two years thereafter.

We encourage our employees to raise ethical concerns that they may have, and Sweco provides an "Ethics Line" to allow anonymous reporting via an external help line.

Supply Chain

Sweco released our 2023 Sustainability and Social Mobility Plan which covers our commitment to social mobility and corporate social responsibility and sets out our pledge to influence our supply chain to expand their commitment to social mobility and commit to anti-slavery best practice, as well as to continue improving our assessments of our supply chain for modern slavery and payment of the living wage. This year, we have taken steps to put the pledges made in our Sustainability and Social Mobility Plan into practice, and in September 2021 we launched our revamped Approved Supplier Process, which applies to all suppliers working for Sweco. In addition to driving our own internal efficiencies and improving compliance and risk reduction, it ensures that all suppliers working for Sweco have been assessed, with business ethics and anti-slavery forming a key part of the assessment. As part of the approval process, suppliers are required to comply with our Code of Conduct, confirm their requirement to produce a modern slavery statement, and provide information on their anti-slavery/human trafficking routines.

Our standard contracts with our supply chain and business partners require that they warrant, represent, and undertake to comply with our code of conduct, and the Modern Slavery Act 2015 with a reporting procedure to Sweco if modern slavery is found in their supply chain.

This statement is made in accordance with section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes Sweco UK Holding Limited's slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year ending 31st December 2021.
